VOLUME V—NO. 1 JANUARY 1912

THE ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGIATE ALUMNAE

The Association of Collegiate Alumnae is the only national unprofessional organization of American college women having for its aim purely educational work. For this reason it is frequently consulted by national bodies and by government bureaus for information with regard to the higher education of women.

The Association was organized in 1882 by seventeen women, graduates of eight American colleges. The representatives were as follows: three alumnae each from Michigan, Oberlin, and Vassar; two each from Boston University, Wellesley, and Wisconsin, and one each from Cornell and Smith. These eight colleges therefore constituted the charter members. At the first meeting of the Executive Committee in January, 1882, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Wesleyan were admitted, and in December of the same year Kansas and Syracuse universities were added to the list. Northwestern University was admitted in 1883, and no more institutions were admitted for three years.

While the organization originated in Boston and the annual meetings were held in that city until 1890, the constitution even as early as 1884 was amended to provide for branch organizations, and the first branch that was recognized was in Washington, New York following three years later. In 1886 the University of California was admitted to membership and the Pacific Coast branch recognized.

In a short general account of the Association it is not best to go too far into historical details, and so the dates of later admissions of universities and the recognition of branches will not be given. The full present corporate membership of the Association can be found on d. 30, and the branches with their local officers are printed in the order of their recognition on pp. 7 to 13.

The national work of the Association is carried on by its standing committees, while the local needs are cared for by the various activities of the branches, forming a chain across the continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

One of the earliest committees formed was the Committee on Fellowships, for as soon as the finances of the Association would warrant it the members showed their "good-fellowship" in setting aside a fund sufficient to send one of their comrades abroad for further study. Since 1890 the Association, through its committee, has awarded an annual fellowship of $500 to some student desiring to further her work by study abroad; and for ten years maintained an American Fellowship of the value of $250. A full list of the fellows of the Association is given in the following pages, and proof of the trust of other bodies of women will there be found, in the notice of the Woman's Education Association of Boston Fellowship, and the Anna C. Brackett Fellowship.

The Committee on Educational Legislation, consisting of members residing in or near the capitals of various states, are our guard for furthering desirable educational legislation, and for calling our attention and marshaling our forces to prevent undesirable legislation.

Those of our members who are serving as presidents or trustees of the colleges in our corporate membership form a group of women who meet for mutual help in the discussion of the problems coming to them. Such subjects as: tuition, number of students, housing, food and hygiene, courses of study, relative merits of entrance by examination or on certificate, student government, the regulation of student activities, and many similiar questions are studied in the light of common experience or experiment with results of advantage to the individual college.

The Association now has a committee to investigate all openings for the college-trained woman along other lines than teaching, the Committee on Vocational Opportunities. This committee keeps in touch with the work of the appointment bureaus in the various colleges, and is largely responsible for the establishment of the Intercollegiate Bureau of Occupations just started in New York. This will doubtless prove only the forerunner of many similar bureaus in other cities.

Even between the March and May meetings of the Association in the first year of its existence, 1882, applications for membership in the Association came to the Executive Committee from graduates of colleges not yet on the roll, and the committee was at once confronted with the policy of admission. The question of admitting on individual qualifications was never considered, the Association stood for a body of corporate members, and when an institution was admitted every graduate of that institution holding a degree in arts, science, or literature was eligible to membership. At a meeting of the Executive Committee, held May 1, 1882, the first Committee on the Admission of Colleges was appointed to recommend a policy for the Association to follow. The first committee of three consisted of Miss Alice E. Freeman, Miss Florence M. Cushing, and Miss Margaret Hicks. From that day to this that committee, with changing membership, has been one of our hardest working committees. Often maligned and their action misunderstood, its members have faced criticisms which have often involved personal friendships, but have held fast to the faith which was theirs, and, largely because of their heroism, for such it often was when an adverse decision was made against much pressure, the Association gained the position which it today holds. It has helped to raise and to broaden collegiate standards in matters of endowment, courses of study, faculties, and salaries. There are now several agencies engaged in unifying standards in higher education, and it is not too much to claim for the Association a very large influence in suggesting, and even in determining, the kinds of tests which are now accepted as authoritative and progressive.

Believing that its work, accomplished as a pioneer, could now be given over to these other agencies, the Association, on the recommendation of its Corporate Membership Committee, voted at its annual meeting of 1911 to adopt until further action the collegiate standard of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching in all academic and financial matters, and to direct its efforts to maintaining suitable conditions for women in those institutions which admit them.

It would be impossible to give any adequate idea of the local work for education which has been, and is, accomplished in the cities and localities where the Association has a branch. Often interpreting "education" in a pretty broad way, the local branch has aided the city in its civic work, its philanthropic work, its social service work. The branch stands for a body of trained women interested first and foremost in educational problems but ready as an organization or by its individuals to give of that training to their fellow-men; for each one believes that the highest ideal of her college is to train its graduates for loyal service. While it thus remembers its duty to others it does not forget the adage that "all work and no play" tends to make one a dull member of society, and with a dull tool one does not accomplish much. The Association serves a social end therefore, and the branch meetings are pleasant occasions for all, and to a member of the Association whose occupation takes her from place to place, her membership in the "A.C.A." acts as a letter of introduction to a congenial circle of people in any city where a branch exists.

We therefore invite to our membership any graduate of any one of the twenty-three colleges or universities at present on our roll, and to our graduate membership any woman holding an advanced non-professional degree from any one of the approved universities found on our list, or from some of the leading foreign universities which have been approved by the Association.
